

Who Does Bullying Hurt? Everyone! Where Does Bullying Hurt? Everywhere!

If you've been bullied, I know how you feel. I was bullied once and kind of still am. The bullying I receive now is much better than what I used to receive. Before I told a teacher, I was told to kill myself. Now I'm just told to shut up on the bus.

I was, and still am, bullied by high school kids, mostly sophomores and freshmen. Ever so often I would cry myself to sleep asking why they said those things to me. I dreaded waking up in the morning and getting out of school. Trying to avoid the bus as much as possible was harder than I expected it to be. Now I can get on the bus with ease knowing I won't have to see the guy who told me to kill myself.

In the beginning, I was teased because my hair was super frizzy with the humidity. Things started to go downhill after that and when I tried to tell them to lay off my brother I was told KYS, or kill yourself. My brother never did anything to help me. In December 2010 I finally told someone. The guy who told me KYS was put in the front of the bus. Now I get told shut up when I start to talk to my brother.

What I want kids who are bullied to do is to tell an adult. When I told someone it helped me relax and get a good night's sleep.
